

I like to explore many different media to create artworks. When you draw, you could use not only pencil, but pen, charcoal, and pastel. When it comes to painting, there are watercolor, gouache, acrylic, and oil. Also, art is not only about drawing and painting, but there are also ceramic, fiber, metal, wood, and all different forms of art.

These are some of my works that I made in other classes. Even though these are not my “masterpiece,” I think these works could give a glimpse of what I pursue as a teaching artist.

I think it’s really important for people to realize that art is not only about drawing and painting. So I would encourage my future students to try exploring various kinds of media.
